SYNOPSIS

SA [REDACTED] transcribed a voicemail sent from [REDACTED] on January 4, 2011.

DETAILS

On January 26, 2011, U.S. EPA-CID Special Agent [REDACTED] completed a transcription of a voicemail received from [REDACTED] on January 4, 2011. SA [REDACTED] left a voicemail message for [REDACTED] on January 3, 2011 requesting [REDACTED] contact SA [REDACTED] regarding the complaint.

In the voicemail, [REDACTED] essentially stated the following information:

"Hi [REDACTED], this is [REDACTED]. I'm returning your call. Um, I'm glad you said alleged, because I've actually corrected that-that entry. I mean I believe that, uh, it is alleged frack fluids. Um, that is how it was presented to me. The photographs were sent to me from somebody that, uh, lives in the Elmira area so I-I'm low on details myself. I'm only republishing what was sent to me. Um, I'm not sure how visible the person, um, is uh-wants to be who actually made the report. So, I will pass along your information to them and, uh, and see if they want to contact you. And, and they-they might require or they might ask for-I don't know. I'm gonna-I'm just gonna talk to them and, you know, see if they, you know, want to, um, you know sort of identify themselves as being witnesses. I kind of-it seems to me like maybe they didn't want to do that for some reason. But, um, I'll contact them and give them, uh your phone number and, uh hopefully we can uh-uh, you know, come to some kind of resolution about this. Maybe it's just an error, you know maybe it was a uh-comment, just uh a simple mistake. I mean the truck was labeled residual waste, so it could be a variety of different things that was in that, but clearly it was leaking out. Whether that was intentional or uh, some kind of uh, some kind of an error or mistake. So, uh, thanks for following up on this and um-um, I'll-I'll get back with you once I hear what these people have to say. Okay, thanks a lot [REDACTED] Bye."
